

Article Overview

Key Latvian manufacturers of cable distribution boxes include ELDI, INTRA-EL, and Elko, offering a range of standard and custom electrical distribution solutions.

ELDI

SIA ELDI specializes in the design and production of all types of distribution boxes, from small local control panels to large automation cabinets. Their products comply with European Union directives, including the Low Voltage Electric Equipment Directive 2014/35/EK and Electromagnetic Compatibility Directive 2014/30/EK, and are built according to the IEC 61439 standard. ELDI provides CE marking and EU declarations of conformity, and can also manufacture cabinets to meet regulatory requirements in other regions, making them suitable for both local and international markets .

INTRA-EL

INTRA-EL has been producing, designing, and installing power and control distribution systems since 2004. They are recognized internationally, with projects completed in 18 countries. INTRA-EL manufactures a wide range of cabinets, from simple solutions to complex automation and control systems for high-capacity industrial facilities. They also offer White Label power and automation cabinets, serving global industry leaders. Their focus on safety, high-quality production processes, and expert engineering makes them the largest manufacturer of power distribution cabinets in Latvia .

Elko

Elko is a Latvian company with over 25 years of experience in electrical material supply, assembly, and project management. While primarily known for supplying electrical materials and managing turnkey projects, Elko also engages in energy distribution construction and design, providing solutions for both medium- and high-voltage systems. They have extensive experience in large-scale projects, including national interconnections and transmission line construction .

Summary

These companies provide a comprehensive range of cable distribution boxes and electrical cabinets, suitable for industrial, commercial, and utility applications. ELDI focuses on compliance and custom solutions, INTRA-EL emphasizes high-capacity industrial and automation systems with international reach, and Elko combines material supply with project management and design expertise. All three are capable of serving both domestic and international clients, ensuring quality and regulatory compliance.
